FOREWORDS.

Like the origin of the Freemen of the City of Canterbury, the origin of these Intrantes or "Enterers" is, as far as I am aware, lost in the mists of antiquity. In our earliest accounts they appear as part of the well-ordered customs of the city, without any word of explanation, or any word of comment. If our accounts reached back far enough we should, I suppose, find the beginnings of Freemen and Intrantes also, but our earliest manuscripts reach only to the year 1392 (except one or two subsidy rolls and some wills), and what occurred before that time is merely a matter of conjecture, and must be left to those who may feel inclined to speculate upon the matter. It is easily conceivable that, supposing Freemen were first, it would be found there were others standing, as it were, at the gates of the city and demanding admittance to some small share of its privileges, and this demand would have to receive attention. Hence men (and women) were admitted to live and trade, or follow their usual occupations within the walls of the city, and for this privilege they had to pay a certain annual fine. In submitting to this fine the new comers were placed more or less on an equality with the men who purchased their freedom. The man who bought his freedom paid for it a certain sum and became free; while he who desired to live and trade in the city paid his yearly fine until he found himself in a position to take up his freedom, when he ceased his annual payments. If he did not become a Freeman he continued to pay until he died or removed beyond the City walls, as did John Mychell, bookbinder, in 1533-4, who migrated from Burgate probably to St. Paul's without the walls, and became the well known printer of that parish.

That many of these Intrantes became Freemen eventually may easily be ascertained if the reader will take the trouble to compare the names in this list with those in my Freemen of Canterbury. The variations in the sums paid I am unable to explain, as all my endeavours to find a rule or a reason have failed. At one time I thought the payments made by Intrantes were taken into consideration when the freedom of the City was taken up, but I cannot prove it. Take two instances: William Oldfield, the bellfounder, purchased his freedom in 1540, when he paid ten shillings. He became an Intrante in 1531-2, and continued to pay his yearly fine until 1538-9. The accounts for 1532-3 and 1535-6 are missing, but assuming that he paid in these years, we have his payments as follows: From 1531-2 to 1536-7, one shilling a year, six shillings; 1537-8, one shilling and fourpence; 1538-9, one shilling. These sums equal 8s. 4d., and this plus ten shillings paid in 1540, when he took up his freedom, make 18s. 4d. Take another case of the same period; Henry Questynbery purchased his freedom in 1543. He first appears as an Intrante 1538-9, and paid 3s. 4d. fine, and this sum he paid annually until 1542-3, that is he paid 3s. 4d. five times, in all 16s. 8d. This added to 13s. 4d., when he became a Freeman, amounts to £1 10s. The sums paid on taking up Freedom at this period varied from 8s. 6d. to £3, the usual fine being 10s. John Courthop, gentleman, paid 8s. 6d., and John Richardson, shoemaker, paid three pounds. Of this John Richardson a few more words may be said. He first appears as an Intrante in 1527-8 when he paid a fine of eight pence. The next account is missing. In 1529-30 he paid twelve pence. In 1530-1, his fine was twenty pence. In 1531-2, it was six shillings and eight pence. The next account is missing. In 1533-4 he paid five shillings; in 1534-5 three shillings and in 1535-6 eight shillings. In the next year he completed his payments and became a full Freeman of the city. It thus cost John Richardson, shoemaker, nearly five pounds to obtain his freedom. Why? The only answer I can suggest is because he was a foreigner, or at all events one who was not born in Canterbury.

Foreigners began to make their appearance and to settle in Canterbury at an early date. Thus we have John Vandegutter, tinker, in 1399-1400, Henry taillour, Duchishman, in 1413-4; Richard Gilbert, Flemying, in 1417-8; and John Martyn, Laurence Gerard, John Molkyn and Nicholas Wyllyam, all Flemings and corvesirs, in 1418-9.

There is a curious uncertainty in the formation of some names, two of which I may be permitted to give here. In 1458-9 we have Loyo Odyrwell; in the next three years he appears as Giles Othirwell,

FOREWORDS.

Eligius Orterwell and Eligius Funderwell, and as Funderwell he continued until 1469-70. Then from 1471-2 until 1476-7 he appears as Loyus Fandrowell. In 1493-4 we find Roger Mully, weaver; in 1495-6 and 7 he is Roger Mulle; in 1497-8 he is Roger Mole and in the next year he is Mully again, and so continued for the next two years. Then in 1500-1 he is suddenly changed into Roger Mulbery! After which he drops back to Mulley, Molly, &c., and ends as Mulley.

There is a certain amount of interest in observing how names have continued through all the centuries practically unchanged. In Canterbury at the present day we have such names as Beer, Callow, Moody, and so on.

As I have said, there is nothing to show when the Intrantes commenced to pay a fine, and I have found nothing which gives any reason for their ending. At first the lists are headed Intrantes or names of Intrantes. In 1530 the list is headed:—"It'm the seid Chamberleyn yeldyth accompt's of the receyt's receyved of the Intrans of syx wards of the seid Citie," and in 1592-3 the heading is practically the same with "enterers" substituted for Intrantes.

As I have long since passed three score and ten this is probably the last of my books relating to Canterbury, but before I bid a final adieu to my readers I may be allowed to say in reply to a reviewer that in no case in any of my books have I in any way tampered with a surname; in every case I have endeavoured to give the name as it appears in my original. If there is "a suspicious uniformity in the spelling of names" I am not to blame for it.
